Pikachu is scared. He knows Bulbasaur can use his leaves to crush him.

So he needs to run to a place where there is electricity.

YOUR TURN

Find an electric socket and put Pikachu near the socket. DO NOT put anything in the socket.

Then turn the page.

Being next to the electric socket helps Pikachu charge up.

Static charge starts to charge up all around his body.

Bulbasaur is in trouble now.

Bulbasaur walks over to Pikachu and zap!

Pikachu hits Bulbasaur with an electric storm.
Bulbasaur is going to lose some hit points there.

But Bulbasaur has a trick of his own.

Bulbasaur needs to run over to a place where there is something from nature, like plants, food, or water.

YOUR TURN

Place Bulbasaur next to something in nature.

Then turn the page.

Bulbasaur can put his vines in other things with nature and control them. Pikachu will not have a chance now.

Pikachu walks over and Bulbasaur tells him to get closer so he can give him a hug.

Oh no! Pikachu walked closer and he got hugged by Bulbasaur's vines. Nature wraps around Pikachu and crushes him

Pikachu is about to lose all of his health from Bulbasaur's vines.

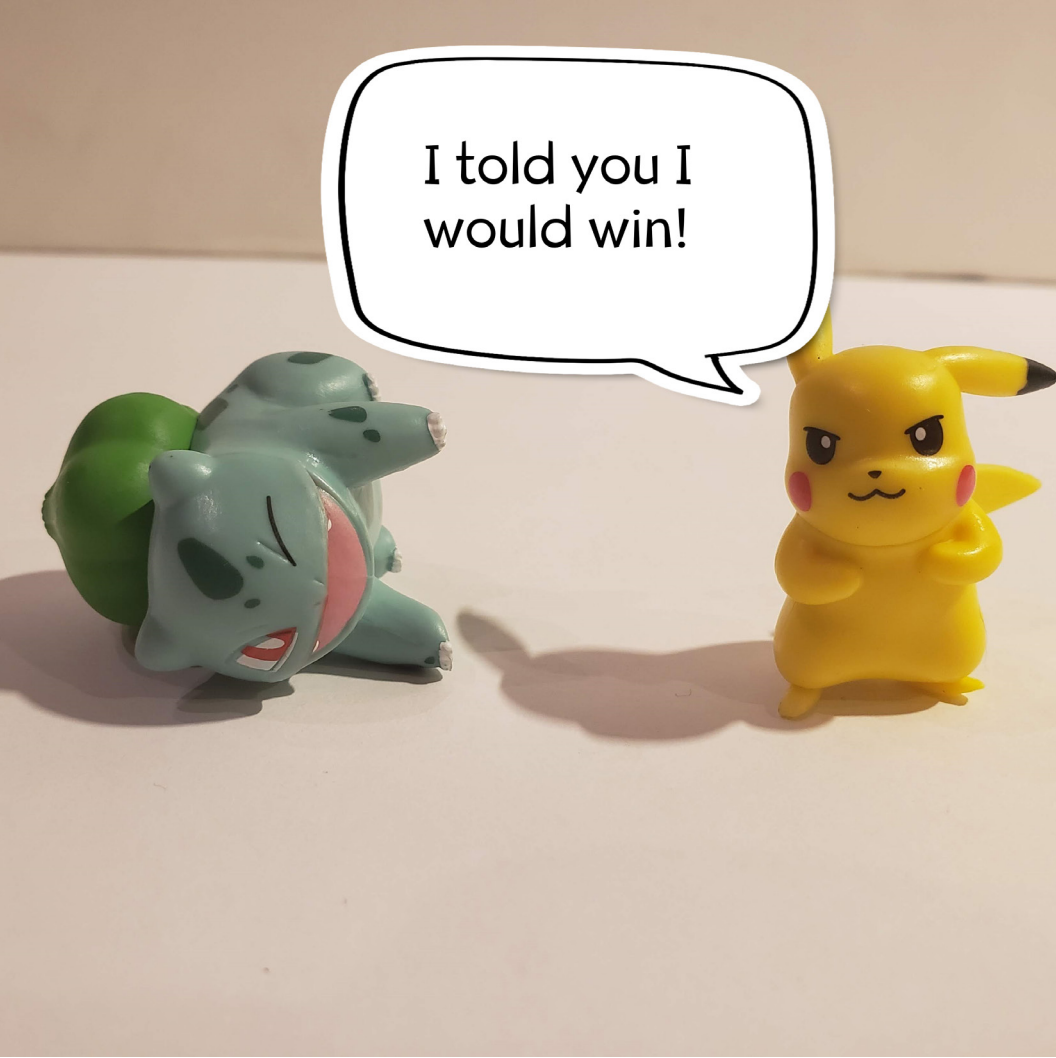

But at the last second he calls out another lightning storm.

The electricity travels through all the water in Bulbasaur's vines and zaps Bulbasaur.

Bulbasaur is knocked out.

Pikachu won. Good thing he charged up with electricity or he would never have escaped.

You picked the winner!

I told you I would win!

The End

Pikachu tries to zap Bulbasaur but he cannot see Bulbasaur with all the leafs around him.

Soon Bulbasaur's vines grow flowers and put Pikachu asleep.
